- Following the transfer in May 1953 of the uranium ore mine in Ladek Zdroj (50°21'N, 16°53'E) from Soviet to Polish administration, four spa buildings were vacated by the Soviets. These buildings, which can accommodate up to 2,000 patients, were in a very bad state of repair from the Soviet occupation. They have since been restored and converted into a sanatorium for tuberculosis patients. the incidence of tuberculosis in Poland at present is appalling.
- The Bieganski General Hospital (Szpital Miejski) in Czestochowa, which has 500 beds, is now being enlarged in order to increase the number of available beds. Towards the end of 1953, the Neurological Department is to be extended.
